

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A process is provided for regulating server request loads by use of a scheduling technique in a system having a client application and a server application. The process involves the server application receiving a request for service from a client application, determining a quality of service for each request, and returning an appointment to the client application reflecting a time at or after which the server application will be able to process the request.

TOP SECRET